Easter

According to the formula for setting the date of Easter, it will fall on April 17 only one more time in the 20th century—in 1960.

The latest date on which it can occur in the solar calendar is April 25. It has fallen on that date only once in this century—in 1943. This will not occur again until the year 2038.

Confusion over the date for Easter stems from conflict between the solar and lunar calendar. In the lunar calendar, Easter always comes at the same time—the first Sunday after the full moon that comes on or next after the vernal equinox. If the full moon happens to come on a Sunday, Easter falls one week later. The formula was agreed on at the council of Christian churches at Nicea in 325 A. D. In 1582 when the Gregorian calendar was introduced, the formula was retained against the objections of those who thought it should be discarded in favor of a fixed date in the solar calendar.

Still further confusion comes from the fact the lunar calendar is not established in relation to the actual moon but to an imaginary moon whose phases are so contrived that it follows the real moon, sometimes by two or three days. In no event can Easter occur before March 22. It occurred on that date in 1761, and in 1818, but this will not happen again during the 20th, 21st or 22nd centuries. Easter will occur on March 22 in 2285.

That Peaceful Boundary

One of the proud boasts about friendly relations between Canada and the United States will have to be suspended after next month. The International Boundary Commission is going to use buoys to mark the border between the two countries in western Lake Erie where friction between Canadian and American fishermen has been causing trouble.

Every school child has learned that the boundary between the United States and Canada is unfortified and unmarked, in the sense that European boundary lines are marked. In the Great Lakes there has not even been the nominal marking that would be considered indispensable by other countries.

It won't be easy to remember that henceforth one exception must be noted—the friction between fishermen in Lake Erie. One could wish the fishermen might see what this means and ask the International Boundary Commission to go join a pyramid club instead while they settled their differences amicably in the Canadian-American manner.

For Farmers Only

One thing the Department of Agriculture should know by this time is that subsidies to farmers had better be kept out of sight and out of mind. As long as the public isn't reminded of them, it doesn't think about them. When it does think about them, it's likely to think in the wrong direction.

If it makes sense for the government to build a floor under farm prices with taxpayers' money, why wouldn't it make sense to subsidize the price of, say, automobiles? It would work like this under the kind of price-support plan now in effect for agriculture: To keep the price of automobiles at peak inflation levels, the government would buy all new cars that can't be sold easily and drive them into the ocean; that would keep the auto factories busy and keep profits high.

Under the kind of plan which Secretary of Agriculture Brannan says would work even better for agriculture, the price of automobiles would be allowed to find its own level, subject only to certain government manipulations. But the government would guarantee the auto industry the difference between what customers would pay and what it had been getting for the preceding 10 years—which would be plenty.

In both cases the cost of the subsidy would be borne by the public. This would be justified by the importance of the auto industry, which is the key to economic stability. Just as agriculture is the key to economic stability. But if anyone dared at this point to suggest price support for the auto industry farmers and other offended patriots would have a conniption.

Nearer To Perfection

Television is doing for plastic surgery what radio did for the teachers of elocution. Just as there was a frantic rush to learn how to talk when radio, then talking pictures, put a premium on enunciation, there now is a rush to be prettified for the television cameras.

This is chiefly a problem for talent in the entertainment business. But beyond that it has great potential consequences in everyday affairs. The day may be coming when everybody will have to look like the most admired people on television screens or be resigned to a life of futility. The photogenic standards already created by moving pictures now are about to be set up in all the places where people look at one another. Will that be good?

Has it been good for Americans to learn to speak like radio announcers, abandoning many of the colloquial expressions which gave local flavor to the American language? Has it been good for them to worship at the retouched photographs of pin-up boys and girls and to make invidious comparisons with the homely faces and misshapen figures of their intimate acquaintances? In a word, is perfection what has been developed by artificial means, or is it the composite of ordinary human beings whose speech is slurred and whose features resemble, more often than not, something that shouldn't have happened to a dog?

The Stars Say
For Sunday, April 17
By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

SUNDAY'S astrological forecast is for a day of high tension excitement and clamor, with all matters suddenly bounding to a dramatic climax, in which heart, home, business, finance and career are combined in a spectacular or quite unpredictable denouement.

All affairs move strikingly to the unexpected culmination, upheaving, disorganizing, even joyously and dramatically, since there are stabilizing factors in the background to be depended upon. Older heads may curb rash and erratic temperaments, while giving blessings to sensational moves and festivities.

For the Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of dynamic and swift-moving events, in which all contacts, desires and adventures move in high tempo, with the active or tacit cooperation of wise heads or sympathetic and understanding hearts.

Be guided by such in the more practical and constructive issues, should bewilderment, sensationalism, or an unforeseen climax to startling events, negative the rational mind supplanted by emotions. A complete upheaval of life interests is probable, but happily, even breath-taking in its whirlwind denouement.

A child born on this day may be prone to sweep all before it in its lofty flights, thoughts, and actions, all along the unusual, spectacular and exciting way of its dynamic career.

For Monday, April 18

MONDAY'S horoscope indicates a progressive and promising state of affairs, with the plans, resources and ambitions keyed to advanced goals. Be astute and sagacious in working out ideas with an eye to change, and new contacts.

Change of scene and associations lure. Nevertheless, brilliant as the prospects seem, there may be pitfalls, schemes or some form of duplicity, subtlety or sinister intrigue. An alert vigilance from every angle could assure lucrative and interesting change.

For the Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may be incited by an urge for new pastures, associations and engagements, in which fresh fields of operation offer dynamic and profitable experiences. With vigilance and prior study of varied advantages there may be pleasant and lucrative relations, with vivid and inspiring change.

However, there is need for exceptional vigilance, since there may be deep-laid schemes, snares, superficially alluring and sound, but with a sinister undertone of the tricky, crafty and hypocritical, in business and personal contacts.

A child born on this day should be talented, resourceful and versatile, and should enjoy a brilliant career. It may, however, in an early youth, be crafty, subtle and dubious schemes or personages.

GUARDING YOUR HEALTH

If a Kidney Stone Forms

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M. D.

WHEN a kidney stone makes itself felt, symptoms are severe. The victim is seized with sudden pain which radiates downward from the region of the kidney. He becomes sick to the stomach and may vomit. Blood is usually present in the urine.

But though these symptoms are violent enough, they are not unmistakable evidence that a kidney stone is present, because a very similar picture of discomfort can be caused by gallstones, appendicitis, or a ruptured ulcer of the stomach or bowel.

Chronic backache may also be caused by disturbances of the spine or neuritis, so that these conditions may be confused with kidney stones. Hence, before a definite diagnosis can be made, a careful study must be carried out by the physician, including X-ray examination. When a stone is present, ordinary X-ray will show it in 95 out of 100 cases.

Injection of Dye
Where it does not, what is known as an intravenous urogram may be used. This is done by giving the patient an injection of a dye into a vein. This dye is excreted through the kidneys, and if an X-ray is taken after the dye is injected, the stone is brought to light.

The acute pain produced by the stone may be relieved by hot packs over the kidney area and injections of drugs to relieve the pain.

If the stone blocks the flow of the urine, a catheter, which is a narrow tube, may be passed into the ureter, which leads from the kidney to the bladder, to relieve the blocking until a thorough study of the condition can be carried out. If the blocking continues or there is severe infection as shown by chills, fever, or sweating, or if the pain is continuous or severe, operation must be carried out to get rid of the stone.

Operation Avoided
In other instances, an operation

Through the Years with Salem - Before the Settlers Came

Before the coming of the first settlers, the region in and around Salem was occupied by small, roaming bands of Chippewas. The Indians lived by hunting and fishing, stopping in one locality barely long enough to permit squaws to plant and harvest a little corn. They lived in rude wigwams and shelters, were often cold and usually a little hungry. It remained for the White Man to see and develop the possibilities of the region. From Indian hunting ground to one of America's best small industrial cities—this has been the story of Salem. Farseeing, energetic men built well. Progressive thoughtful men are continuing the work. Mullins is proud to present these stories of a still developing community, a community of which the company feels itself a part.

This is the first of a series of human interest anecdotes concerning persons and events in the days when Salem was young, published in the belief that these tales of a worthy past will be an inspiration for an even brighter future. Farseeing, thoughtful men built well. The next will appear in this paper Saturday and each Saturday thereafter.

What Every Soldier Prays At Easter

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK — (AP) — This is a nice Easteride, because men don't have to talk to God alone in a foxhole.

This hasn't been necessary for some four years. In crowded small church or tall cathedral of Christian lands families can worship Jesus in peace.

But many an ex-soldier, looking at the young son kneeling beside him, will wonder:

"Will my boy some day have to— as I did—pray alone at this time in some place of war?"

And he will offer up a small silent prayer of his own that this won't happen. And the prayers will be said in many languages—English, French, Dutch, Russian, German, Italian.

Easter has a peculiar niche in the heart of men in combat. At Christmas thoughts of religion aren't in their minds so much as the memories of their families. The broken packages full of small gifts come, and they are homesick to the bone.

But at Easter the story of Christ's death and rebirth, stirred the doughboy of the second world war deeply. Part of it, perhaps, was tied up also with the rebirth of the particular land he was fighting across. He could lie in his muddy foxhole and see the green spears of grass springing from the winter-looked earth.

I don't know how the fighter pilot felt at Easter, climbing a tranquil sky. Probably he felt like the poet-artist who wrote he had the sensation of being almost able to reach out and touch the hand of God.

But I do know how many of the walking soldiers felt. Some came to believe that they understood the Gallilean carpenter better than anybody. For the infantryman suffers most in war, and lives on faith. They came closer to Him through the kinship of agony.

It isn't true, of course, that there were no atheists in foxholes. But the atheist was a particularly lonely man at Easter. His foxhole held only a man with an animal desire to keep on living. But the foxhole next to him held that and something more—a man with faith that if he were killed there was a spiritual life beyond.

I don't know that this made any difference to a German artillery shell. But it made a difference to the two men.

Wherever possible, the front line soldiers were brought back a few thousand yards at Easter, a group at a time, to attend brief religious services. This gave them a respite from rifle and mortar fire. But they were still within enemy bombardment range.

Once I attended one of these services in a clearing in a cork forest in northern Tunisia. After it was over a grimy infantryman said to me thoughtfully:

"I know this must puzzle God. We come out of the lines to pray to Him. On the other side the Germans must be doing the same thing. Everybody praying for peace."

"But when we're through we go right back into the lines and start trying to kill each other again. Does that make sense to God? It doesn't to me."

Well, this year the problem doesn't exist. And that is the blessing of Easter—1949.
